MONDAY, March 5th, 1744. [Numb. 519]

Abstract from P. Du Halde's general History of China, Chinese Tartary, &c. describing an Engine made Use of by the Chinese, for readily conveying Water into Rice Fields and high Lands, when the Seasons require it; which, as it may be of general Service to this Province, I persuade myself will be agreeable to most of my Readers.

'THIS Kind of ENGINE which they make Use of is very simple, both with respect to its Make and the Manner of playing it; it is compos'd of a Chain made of Wood, like a large Ring, which consists of a great Number of small pieces of Board or Teuchers of six or seven Inches square, strung through the Middle, and placed at equal Distances parallel to each other; this Chain is laid in a wooden Trough made of three Planks, in such a Manner that the lower part of the Ring lies at the Bottom of the Trough, and fills it exactly, and the upper part, which is parallel to it, is close to a Plank laid on the open part of the Trough; the lower part of the Ring passes round a moveable Cylinder, whose Axle Tree is laid upon the Two sides of the lower End of the Trough; the other End of the Ring, that is to say, That above, is supported by a kind of Drum, with little Boards fixed to it in such a Manner that they suit exactly with the Boards of the Chain; this Drum, being turn'd about by a Power applied to its Axletree, causes the Chain to turn, and as the upper part of the Trough, by which the Drum is supported, is fixt at the same Height as the Water is to be brought, and the inferior part is plung'd into the Water that is to be rais'd, it is necessary that the inferior part of the Chain, which exactly fills the Tube or Trough, in ascending through the Tube carries with it all the Water which is between each Board, that is as much as the Tube can contain, in a continual Stream to the Place where it is designed, as long as the Machine is in motion; mean while the upper part of the Chain descends gradually along the Plank which supports it; these two Motions join'd together make all the Secret of the Machine: It is put in motion three Ways in the following Manner.

'Firſt with the Hand, either with one or two Windlesses fix'd immediately to the Ends of the Axle Tree of the Drum.

'Secondly with the Feet, by Means of certain large wooden Pegs standing out about half a Foot round the Axle Tree of the Drum; these Pegs have large longish Heads, round on the Outside, that is to say, of a proper Shape to tread upon with naked Feet; insomuch that several Men, according to the Number of the Rows of the Pegs, either standing or sitting, may easily put the Engine in Motion with very little Trouble, holding an Umbrella in one Hand and a Fan in the other, and so send a continual Stream to the thirsty Land.

'Thirdly, by the Assistance of a Buffaloe, or some other Animal, who is made fast to a great Wheel about Four Yards in Diameter placed horizontally; in the Circumference of which are fixed a great Number of Pegs or Teeth, which tally exactly with Teeth of the same sort fixed round the Axle Tree of the Drum, by which Means the largest Machine is turned about with Ease. ——'

ITALY.

FROM the different Accounts of the State of the Plague, it may be inferred at least that it does not much encrease, though it is to be remembered that in every Place it is concealed. This Secrecy, which may be termed a Species of Treason against the whole Body of Mankind is observed either to escape the Severities which are thought necessary to prevent Contagion, or for a Reason less justifiable, to avoid the Interruption of Traffick

The Corsicans being now set free from the Interposition of any foreign Power, rise in their Demands, and treat the Offers of the Republick of Genoa with that Contempt which Confidence of Superiority naturally produces. The State of the Treaty between the Genoese and Corsicans is very clearly explained in the following Articles and the Answers.

1st. Proposition. The Republick will enlarge the General Amnesty.

Ans. As the Republick has had Ten Years, from 1732, to this Day, to resolve upon this Article, the Kingdom of Corsica demands a Year for settling it.

2d Prop. She will grant the Use of Fire-Arms, on taking out Letters Patent for the same.

Ans. The Use of Arms was allow'd in all Times to the Corsicans, without any Expence, as a natural Priviledge which is their Due, and which they are actually in Possession of.

3d Prop. She promises to discharge the People from the Augmentation made to the Tailla for every Hearth, from two to six, because of the Liberty they have taken to carry Arms. This Abatement shall take Place, upon Condition that the People do pay in full the Tailla of the Year 1742.

Ans. The Corsicans are already discharged from this Tax.

4th Prop. No Body found with Arms shall be taken up or punished.

Ans. A needless Article; all the People being free to carry Arms.

5th Prop. The Tailla which was paid before the Troubles shall not be augmented, without a Resolution of one or the other Council, and without the Consent of the Parishes.

Ans. No Council ought to be empowered to lay Taxes on the Kingdom; but the Corsican Senate and the Tribunals that are to be established, as shall be shewn hereafter, shall alone have a Right to do it for the Good of the Kingdom; in the mean Time the Tailla shall be put on the antient Footing, viz. a Livre for every Hearth

6th Prop. A Pardon shall be granted to all Persons, of whatever Rank or Condition they be, even to those that have been imprisoned either upon Suspicion, or for having had a Hand in the past and present Troubles

Ans. This Article is needless, for the Reason alledg'd in Regard to the first Proposition: They only add, That the Republick shall freely relinquish all the Lands and Places belonging to the Communities and private Persons; such as Baronies, Capitals, which, under the Name of Fiscal, have been taken from the Corsicans, and make an express Declaration that the Fiscal of Genoa shall never more have any Right to confiscate any Thing in this Kingdom, pursuant to an Act made so early as the Year 1388

7th Prop. That it will be proper to enlarge more amply on the sixth Article; but that no Difficulty shall be made to deliberate on the two Demands that have been made concerning the Ecclesiastick and Temporal Dignities and Employments; nor to facilitate the Concession thereof, pursuant to the verbal Declaration made on this Head by his Excellency M. Justiniani to M Limperani, Deputy of the Corsicans; who shall report the Whole to Messr. Brandimonti, Mari and Jantis-Francis Pietri, his Colleagues.

Ans. In Regard to the 6th Article one Year is sufficient to consider of it; but as for the Ecclesiastick Benefits and Civil Employments, they shall devolve to the Corsicans;

Corſicans; which Regulation ſhall paſs into a Law by the New Statutes which the Corſicans themſelves will draw up.

6th Prop. The above Articles ſhall take Place as ſoon as the Troubles ceaſe, and the People give Proofs of their Submiſſion to their Prince; and this to commence from the Day that ſhall be fix'd by his Excellency.

Anſ. The Troubles ſhall ceaſe whenever the Republick ceaſes to occaſion them, and ceaſe about governing with Lenity and Juſtice, and forbears to make Attempts on the Lives, Honour and Eſtates of private Perſons, as ſhe has done heretofore —— Done at Baſtia (the Capital of Corſica,) in June 1743.

On this Negotiation few Remarks are neceſſary, it is evident that the Republick would be now content with very moderate Terms, and that the Corſicans ſuſpect that if once they ſhould admit their Maſters again, the Stipulation would quickly be forgotten, and that this Appearance of Candour is only the Artifice of diſabled Oppreſſion.

SPAIN.

However we may boaſt of having weakened Spain by obſtructing the Conveyance of her Treaſures and the Succour of her Troops, it is certain that if Spirit can ſupply the Place of Force, ſhe will not eaſily be conquered. For inſtead of inclining to ſolicite for Peace, ſhe has tranſmitted to France a Plan for a more vigorous Proſecution of the War, in which it is propoſed, That Naples, Spain, and France ſhall enter into a League offenſive and defenſive, of which one Article ſhall be not to lay down their Arms 'till Don Philip is eſtabliſhed in Italy; That Spain ſhall declare War againſt the Queen of Hungary, and ſend an Army into Tuſcany, to which the Right is forfeited by the Deſign of conquering Lorrain, That the Engliſh Squadron ſhall be driven out of the Mediterranean by the united Fleets of France and Spain. And that Savoy ſhall be yielded to France. Theſe Speculations, if they cou'd be reduced to Practice, doubtleſs are ſuch as the Houſe of Bourbon cannot but indulge with Pleaſure, but the Execution of this Deſign depends upon the Conqueſt of the Engliſh Fleet, and is therefore yet at a great Diſtance.

FRANCE.

Though the French have been hitherto diſappointed in their Deſigns of reducing the Power of the Houſe of Auſtria, and have appeared not to proſs any of their preſent Schemes with their uſual Activity, there is Reaſon to ſuſpect, that they have not ſo much wanted Strength for more vigorous Meaſures, as reſerved it in Hopes of having a more favourable Opportunity. Had the Conſpiracy diſunited Ruſſia from the Houſe of Auſtria, the Confederacy would have been very much weakened and a ſingle Battle might have reſtored France to its former Power. The Conſpiracy is diſcovered and they are now endeavouring to take Advantage of the diſcovery, but it may be reaſonably hoped that they have made their Deſigns and their Maxims too publick to obtain any Credit. As the Approach of Winter puts a Stop to the Operations of War, it is likely that the Interval will be employed in Negotiations, in which they have ſeldom been unſucceſsful, but in which they muſt however have leſs Superiority as they are leſs feared and leſs truſted.

POSTSCRIPT TO THE SOUTH-CAROLINA GAZETTE.

OF

MONDAY, March 5*th*, 1744. [Numb. 519]

From the London Magazine for November, 1743.

DON Philip with the Spaniſh and French Army under his Command, having towards the End of September made a general Attack upon the Paſſes into Piedmont, near Chateau-Daupbin, which were defended by the Piedmonteſe Army, commanded by their King in Perſon, and both the Spaniards and French being in every Place repulſed with great Loſs, they were at laſt obliged to give over their Deſign for this Seaſon, and retire to their Winter Quarters, the former in Savoy, and the latter in Provence. This Diſappointment left the Auſtrian Army under the Prince Lobkowitz, then in the Bologneſe, at full Liberty to purſue their Deſigns againſt the Spaniſh Army commanded by the Duke de Modena and Count Gages, then encamped at Rimini. Accordingly, Prince Lobkowitz, as ſoon as he heard of Don Philip's Repulſe, began to make Preparations for marching to attack the Spaniards in their Camp at Rimini, and on the 13th of laſt Month advanced as far as Forli, and ſome of his Huſſars puſhed on as far as Savignano, and attacked ſome Spaniſh Troops in their Retreat from the Bridge they had upon the Reneo, which they abandoned upon the Approach of the Auſtrians. In this Rencounter the Spaniards loſt 7 or 800 Men, and Count Gages began to fortify his Camp at Rimini, as if he intended to wait there for the Enemy. But finding they were reſolved to attack him, and were marching for that Purpoſe, he retreated to Peſaro and Fano, where the Ground is more convenient for him, becauſe the Auſtrians cannot there make any Uſe of their Horſe, in which they greatly exceed the Spaniards. On the 15th the Auſtrians took Poſſeſſion of the Spaniſh Camp at Rimini, where they were to wait for a Reintorcement of ſeveral Regiments of Foot then upon their March to join them; ſo that we may ſoon expect to hear of a Battle in that Part of the World, or of the Spaniards having retired into the Kingdom of Naples; which, if that King permits, may expoſe him to fatal Conſequences, becauſe it will be a Breach of the Neutrality which he has promiſed.
